

Why appear no payments before war?

K3 a whole year before war

Is it not likely that one or more payments were between Aug 13, Aug 14 1914 viz to the Repub made? It is only vaguest of memories but I should guess that they were.

157 was after war had broken out.

Evidently

I don't suppose C.U.P would have known about the payments if made.
Because they were not made to subsidise the bank and had no direct relation to the bank. No payments were intended to make Johnson financially able to resign his lectureship at C.U. for which he had been paid a salary and thus gives him more time to get on with his own philosophical research and thinking

Note that W had no regular job
at Cambridge before war. That came later.
He had been a lecturer at Liverpool and went under his own steam, so to speak, big financial because he wanted to go to Bertrand Russell's (not Bertrand ^{Johnson}) lectures there.

Bertrand regarded him ^{as} ^{bore} a fearful man. It was Keynes, not Russell, who was fond of him, tho his subject was of course it's for B. Russell. He knew mostly about Econ.

to Brian McGuinness.

1. I am quite confident that payments were made

2. The bracketed sentence at end of your para 1
leaves no room for doubt.

3. 4 got in touch with Joseph Solomon Bernhard.

Dont know whether still alive. Saw him about a dozen years ago. Doc. of most distinguished persons I have known. A brother schoolboy of dear friend of mine, brother.

3. Payments after war would have been impossible.

Austrian currency completely blocked.

Top mathematician & maths physicist. Offered fellowship at Trinity Cambridge. He refused to go out to dig in Palestine afterwards Tel Aviv. Dismissed & sought advice as to what to do with the rest of his life. I don't know what he ~~had done~~ did do.

5. I know Whitehead very well. His son was also school boy friend. Falsified his age and joined air force when he was ^{only} just seventeen. Was sent after to France after little more than 3 months training - ~~we~~ were more ruthless in World War I; ~~they~~ well, ~~they~~ had to be; our situation was more desperate than in World War II - and was almost immediately killed.

6. Whitehead was "at home" after dinner once a week when he became professor at the College of Science & Technology in South Kensington - later incorporated in London University - and I went regularly with them was ~~constantly~~ very important to prevent me.

7. He was a very charming & sweet person. He had none of nothing of Bloomsbury; I think that he rather disliked Bloomsbury. So one must just the run of professors or students at the college, and some ladies who had a very literary French wife, but ~~she~~ ^{to the extent that} she was a little bit of a show off - not much so - it was social rather than intellectual show-off. But sawal lights hadn't the faintest idea that Whitehead was a person of any importance. The consequence was that his little gatherings ^{were} considered to be pretty dull people.

8. But I always made an effort to go to one of Whitehead's little meetings, such an interesting man and of great charm. I always enjoyed going up there very much indeed.

9. I don't recall his ever saying anything about W.
