My dear Harrod: (We will dispense with honorifics.)

Your letter of November 3 has duly reached me. It is most obliging on your part to undertake to give an estimate of Keynes' book. I know the book deserves the thorough and well-judged notice, or article, which you would make. But we have already committed ourselves. The book has been announced for some time, and we have already asked a man whom we consider thoroughly capable to make a review, or article, on it. I take it you will say your say about it in some other periodical.

Always with cordial regards,

Very truly yours,
